

DB Gurus Website

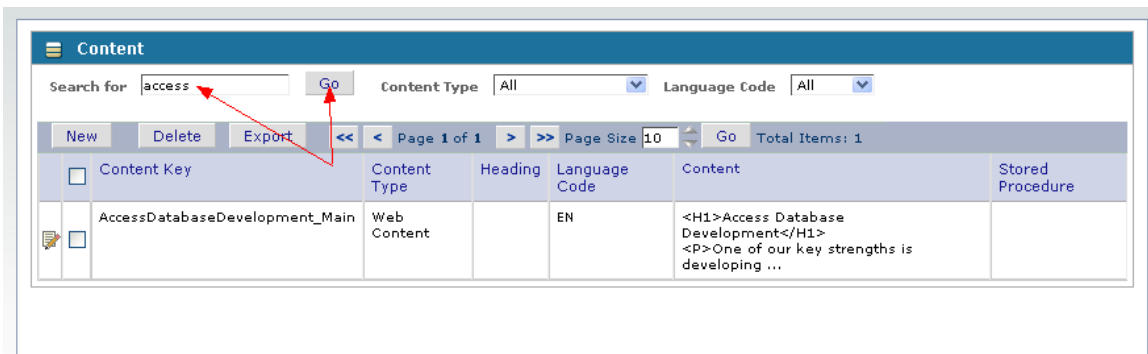

Note that the DB Gurus website is more complex than most client sites because:

1. It is multi-lingual
2. Each page has 3 sections (Main, Left, Right)

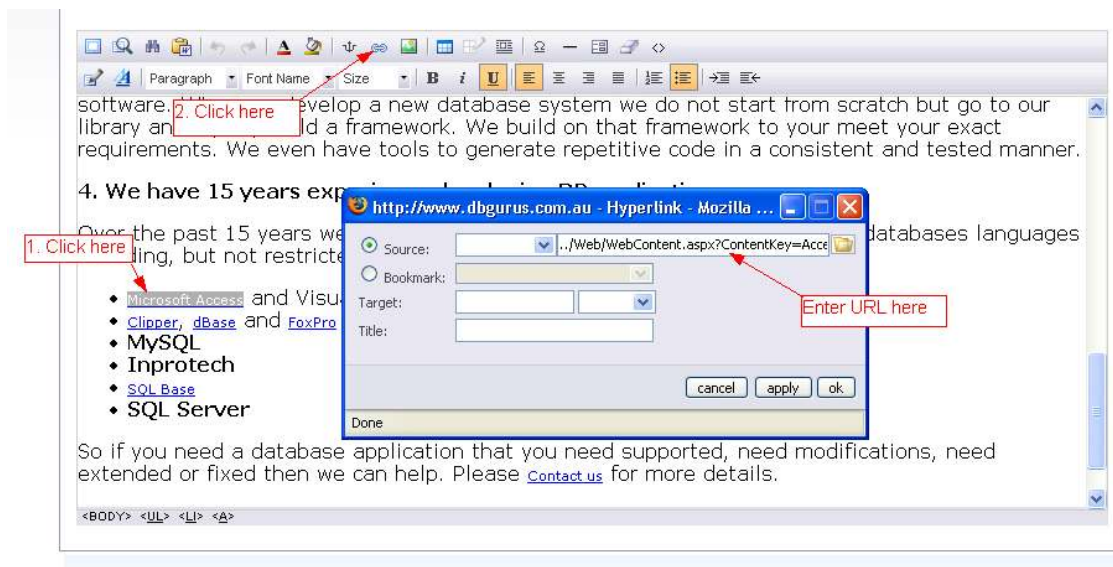

This example may be confusing to clients with a more simple setup.

Adding Content

Searched to see if there was Content there already (it will use the old page name generally)

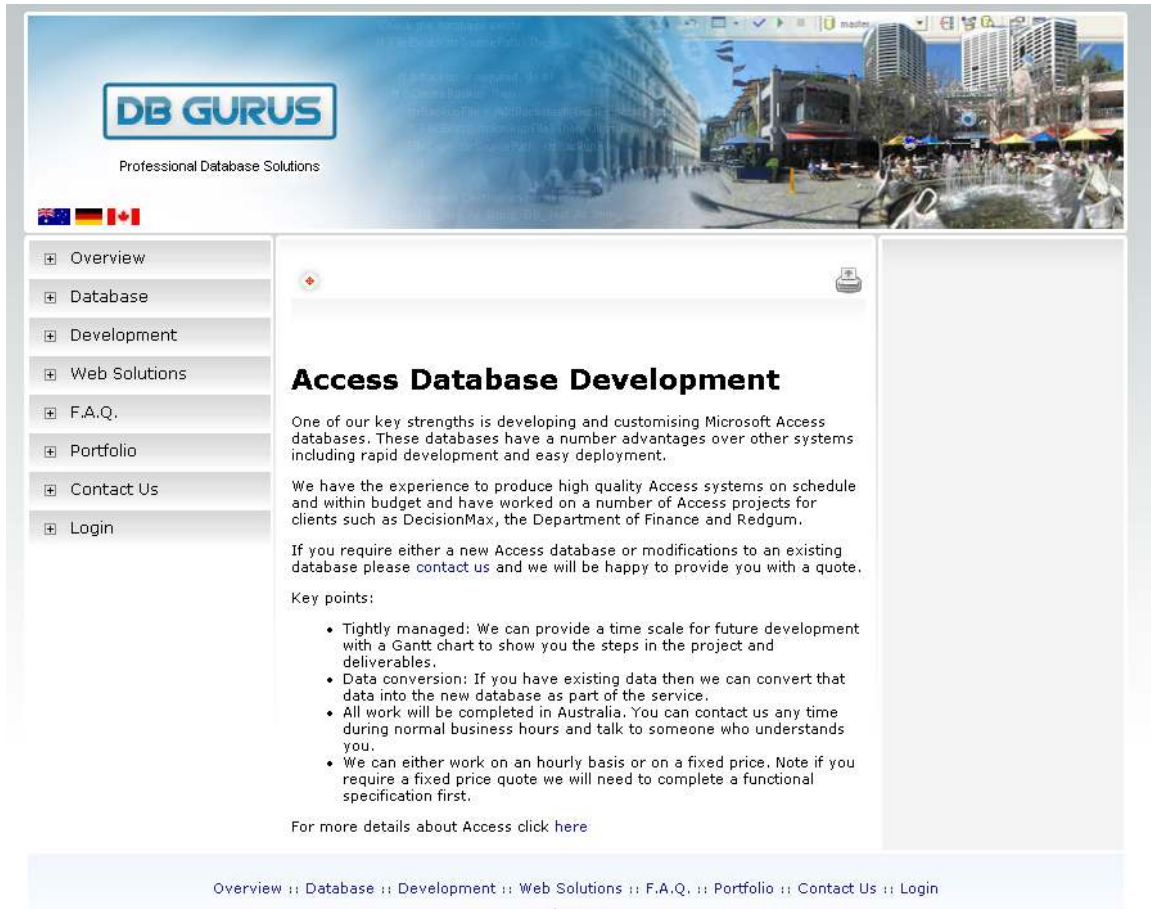

Changed the link to point to that (without the _Main)

NOTE: The URL is in this format:

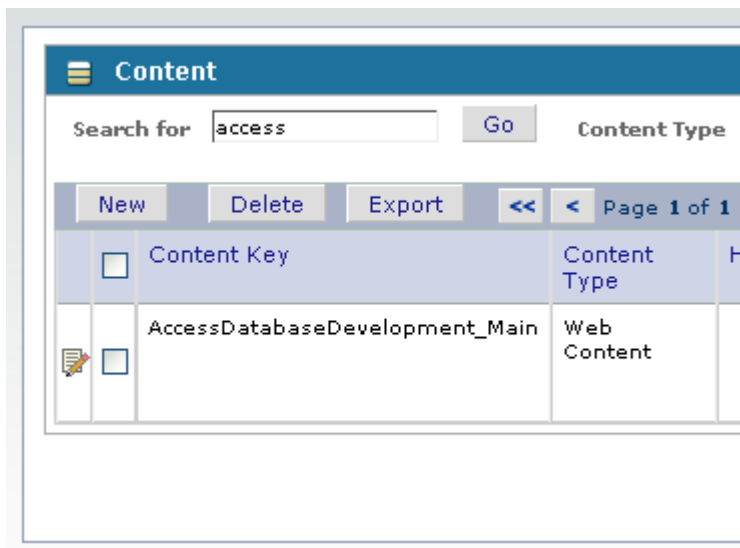

../Web/WebContent.aspx?ContentKey=AccessDatabaseDevelopment_Main

Tested it:

Its OK but the text "Access Database Development" needs to be moved into the heading so it appears next to the red bullet point

I find the item:

I click on Edit and I move it to the Heading box:

Access Database Development

One of our key strengths is developing and customising Microsoft Access databases. These databases have a number advantages over other systems including rapid development and easy deployment.

We have the experience to produce high quality Access systems on schedule and within budget and have worked on a number of Access projects for clients such as DecisionMax, the Department of Finance and Redgum.

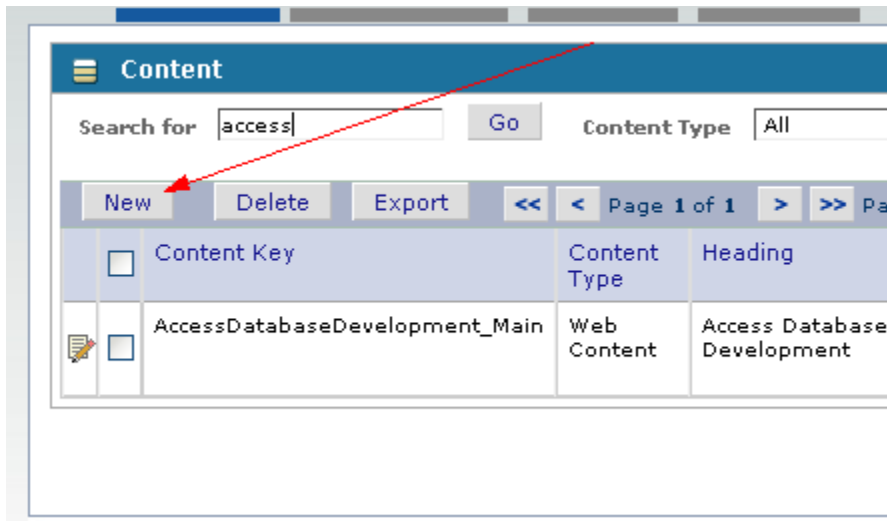

If you require either a new Access database or modifications to an existing database please contact us and we will be happy to provide you with a quote.

Key points:

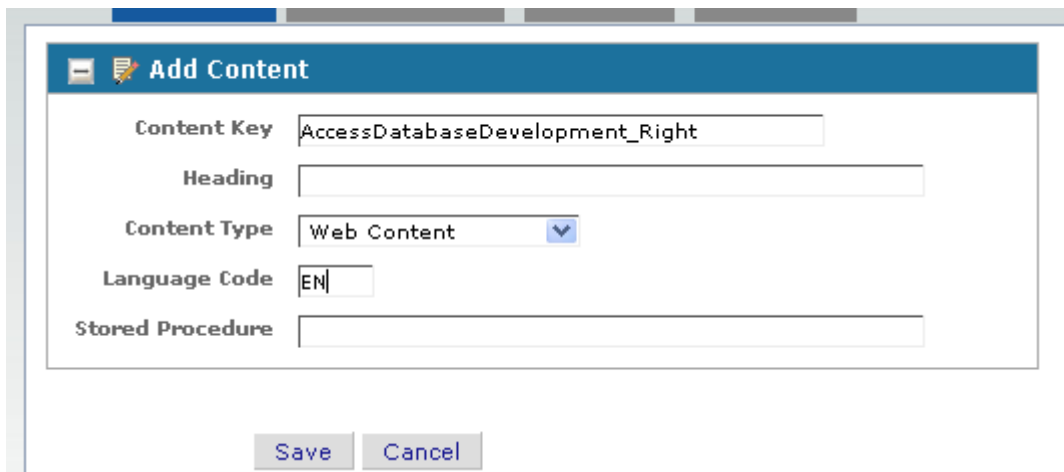

- Tightly managed: We can provide a time scale for future development with a Gantt chart to show you the steps in the project and deliverables.
- Data conversion: If you have existing data then we can convert that data into the new database as part of the service.
- All work will be completed in Australia. You can contact us any time during normal business hours and talk to someone who understands you.
- We can either work on an hourly basis or on a fixed price. Note if you require a fixed price quote we will need to complete a functional specification first.

I see that there is nothing in the right hand panel but there was in the original so this time I can going to create a new Content item

And call is AccessDatabaseDevelopment_Right

And copy it from the old website as best I can (I removed Daniel Farnam because he does not work for us any more but you get the idea)

I retest and now it looks fine:
